

GENERAL WESLEY CLARK – REAL LEADERSHIP FOR AMERICA’S FUTURE

America needs new leadership in the White House. While there are many good Democrats in the 2004 presidential race, there is clearly one candidate who is best positioned to defeat George W. Bush next November and put our country back on the right track: General Wesley Clark.

General Clark’s combination of foreign policy and homeland security expertise, dramatically different from the administration’s approach, coupled with his responsible stance on domestic issues, makes him uniquely qualified to win in 2004 and serve as our nation’s next President.

Clark’s Strong Record of Experience

- Four-star U.S. Army general, with a 34-year military career
- NATO Commander during Operation Allied Force in Kosovo
- Successful businessman
- Internationally respected foreign policy analyst
- First in his class at West Point
- Rhodes Scholar

Clark’s Agenda for America

- Reestablishing the United States as a respected international leader and restoring global partnerships to resolve disputes
- Ensuring the strength of America’s military, but using it only as a last resort
- Protecting civil liberties and personal privacy by reexamining the Patriot Act
- Reducing runaway budget deficits and restarting America’s economy by investing in jobs and homeland security, without giving away tax cuts to the wealthiest Americans who need them least
- Supporting America’s families with better education and access to health care
- Protecting a woman’s right to choose
- Preserving affirmative action while rejecting race-based quotas
